

WASHINGTON CRITIC COMPANY, BALLET RILBOURN, PRESIDENT.

OFFICE: 943 D STREET N. W. POST BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D. C. TERMS:

single Copy.

By Carrier, per month.

By Mail, postage paid, one year.

By Mail, postage paid, six months.

By Mail, postage paid, per month.

Co Cents

Mail subscriptions invariably in advance.

Address THE WASHINGTON CRITIC,

Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, APRIL 80, 1889. PRESIDENTIAL RECEPTIONS.

The Cabinet meets on Tuesdays and Fridays at 12:30 p. m. Senators and Representatives in Congress will be received by the President every day, except Mondays, from 10 until 12. Persons not members of Congress having business with the President will be received from 12 until 1 on Wednesdays, Thursdays

Those who have no business, but call merely to pay their respects, will be rerelyed by the President in the East Room at 1 n. m. on Mondays. Wednesdays and

VISITORS TO THE DEPARTMENTS Secretaries Blaine, Proctor and Tracy have issued the following order for the reception of visitors:

Reception of Senators and Representatives in Congress, from 10 to 12 o'clock.

Reception of all persons not connected with the Departments, at 13 o'clock, except Tuesdays and Fridays, which are Cabinet days; and Thursdays in the Department of State, when the members of the Diplomatic Corps are exclusively received.

Persons will not be admitted to the build ing after 2 o'clock each day, unless by card. which will be sent by the captain of the watch to the chief clerk or to the head of the bureau for which the visit is intended. This rule will not apply to Senators, Representatives or heads of Executive Depart-

THE CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION. The Centennial Celebration at New York is a great success. Botched and bungled as some of the social details of the affair have been, yet, as a whole, the celebration has been all that was anticipated. The event was too great for it to be otherwise. The centennial of the first inauguration of a President of the United States and in the principal city of the Union afforded not only opportunity but the impulse for the agnificent demonstration which has taken place. New York is to be congratulated, and so is the country. No doubt there will be a disposition to celebrate the anniversary on a still trander scale in the year 1989-that is, if the Republic continues one and continues in its career of prosperity. Will such be its fortune for another 100 vears?

ry was to be subdued, with social problems presented of no very complex character. The people were Anglo-Saxon. The slavery problem, the one threatening thing, was disposed of only at an awful cost, but it cleared the atmosphere. A century of the Republic has been a success.

Now comes the evil of a hybrid population, the result of a senseless encouragement of immigration of any sort, and now comes the problem of dealing with the restless and reckless mobs of the large cities. The Republic has not so promising a century ahead as was the last one-though the forefathers didn't know it. However, there's no use in being pessimistic.

Our esteemed contempory, the Post, does not think THE CRITIC, and its evening contemporary, justified in giving in their issues of yesterday pictures of the victim of the Benning's murder. THE CRITIC does not agree with the Post, in its view-else of course the picture would not have been printed. A murdered girl had been found whose identity was unknown. She belonged apparently to a class, the disappearance of a member of which would not attract much attention, and to learn who she was and thus find the murderer, was a matter of difficulty. The only course for the police was to secure a photograph of the dead girl, and secure for it as wide a circulation as pos sible, in the hope that it would be recognized by some one. The hope was justified by the event. The publication of the picture promoted the ends of justice. The probable murderer of the girl found in the Benning's woods, now occupies a cell.

A great many things, not pleasant in themselves, are done for the promotion of the public's good. The printing of yesterday's picture was a case in point.

The New York — of this morning contained the most complete and interesting and expensive account of the celebra-P. S. New York papers please copy and fill the blank to suit themselves, N. B. Omit the above P. S. and this N. B.

THE WOLVERINE wanted for the zoological collection of the Government may be secured after all. A Minnesota man writeto THE CRITIC that he has the animal stready captured. It remains to be learned whether the beast be really a wolverine and alive, and how it is to be got here.

GENERAL GREELY Is going into long-time weather predictions after May 1. The General should try a few back-action weather predictions. For instance, what kind of weather tild we have lead to the control of the c eather did we have last week ?

A "MARINE PAGEANT" in New York is a kind of a necessary evil. THE CATHOLIC Congress in Madrid pessed a resolution yesterday demanding the restoration of the temporal power to the Pope. By the way, what is the relative position of Spain compared with the othe nations of the world?

THE CHIEF JUSTICE and the Postmaster-General were overlooked in the rush at Elizabeth yesterday and left on the train. GENERAL GREELY "has it In" for George Washington, too. If General Greely had lived in Jerusalem 1900 years ago he-however, we will not go into the past. A REVIVAL of religion was organized in Oklahoma Sunday, but it wouldn't go. The kind of a time they are having out there isn't spelled with an r.

THE RUSTLE MUST go, and most of it has gone to New York. That town never ustled so in all its existence as it PRESIDENT HARRISON WAS not torn sunder yesterday in a catch-as-catch-can between Stuyyesant Fish and Governor Arnti, 30 some rain; March 4 a great deal more rain. NEW YORK was foaded with ball last

THE PRIZE CENTURY PLANT. The greatest of all century plants Is blossoming to-day; Its limbs o'erspead a continent,

Its roots are fixed to stay. The thunder of a thousand guns Is rolling o'er the bay, Because, you see, the century plant

Is blossoming to-day ! There's merry music everywhere, With bunting all is gay, Hurrah! Because the century plant Is blossoming to-day !

CRITICULAR.

WHY GEORGE WALKED. The spirit of G. Washington Went through the train that night The journalists left Washington To claim New York by write.

He saw the folks with Harrison He passed along the train, He held his Little Hatchet up; "I can't," he said, "complain.

And then be reached the press gang car Where Boyd and Parke had placed The journalists, whose burning truths The papers oft had graced.

G. Washington stood there entranced, And heard the young men talk:
"Here, take my hatchet, gents," he er "And I'll get out and walk."

Talk is sheep with the wool man

The weigh of the transgressor is short.

The first can never be last in a sho maker's shop.

The attention of Editor Wilkins of the Post is called to the following sad and pain ful notice which appeared in that paper this morning: DIED.

CUTTER-FULLER.—At Ithnea, N. Y., April 25, 1889, at the residence of the bride's grandmother. Mrs. L. H. Culver, William Parken Cutter of Washington, D. C., to Cona A man stopped in this morning to say

"When a fellow thinks he has a dead sure thing on a banaua peel he often slips up on The man walked lame and

The mule is not a native of brays ill. The Centennial Ball passed off in New York last night without bloodshed. Mr. Ward McAllister should go out to

Oklahoma and organize society out there

He Was There.

silk hat, dinged and ruffled. He was ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes. Dressed in a quiet suit of black, his neckwear was antique in pattern and his coat bore evidence of the handiwork of a country tailor. His face was the same as it was when he whiter as to his heard and his hair, which is almost patriarchal in its length. He was surrounded by a crowd of brilliantly equipped civic warriors, done up in tinsel and gold, with marvelous gilded braids and epaulets, who were accompanied by a dozen ladies, bearing on their fair persons the best work of Ohio's modistes. All crowds are democratic. When 2,000 persons are waiting for an hour or more for a steamboat to land no one respects his betters, and so the ex-President was jostled and turn bled about as though he were made of the clay that common kind is fashioned of. When he went through the gate that led to the Erastus Wiman, that was to carry the General Committee and the Governors, the Legislators and their friends down the bay to meet and greet the President, the gatekeeper demanded his ticket the same as he did those of the dry goods clerk who was directly behind him and the reporter who followed in his wake.

One Happy Man. One of the happy Republicans left town Saturday night for his home in Ashland, Ky. It was W. W. Patterson, who had that day received his appointment as Postoffice Inspector for the Deuver Division. Mr. Patterson was removed by President Cleveland because he was an offensive partisan who insisted upon being perniciously active, and because he was that kind of a man he got in again. There is no more of the Mugwump in Patterson's make-up than there is chalk in a can of Blue Grass cream. He is a politician who believes in being a party man first, last and all the time, and he doesn't exactly see how any Democrat can render service to the Republican party in any capacity, except to stay away from the polls on election day. He was active and efficient in office and had a fine record, which accounts for his rapid reappointme and is competent testimony for future efforts. When the Postmaster-General "struck Billy Patterson" he struck a good fellow all around and made a ten-strike

TIS NOW

Tis now the sunbeams come and wake To life the sleeping flowers; Tis now the bees metodious make The listless sylvan hours; Thanow the birds gay music charms The woodlands to reply. The woodlands to reply.

Tis now the tramp is up in arms

For gold roast beef and pie.

Tis now the violet looks out,
And shames the azure sky;
The now the insects haste about
For winter to supply;
Tis now within the vault so blue
Soft, fleesy clouds do float;
Tis now (ob, joy) the youthcan do
Without his overcoat;
—[Merchant Traveler,

HIGH TARIFF. "Im going to hang my stocking up."
Said ida, "hear me vow."
"I'd like to see, "forn skyly said.
"What you've got in it mov."
"The tariff's high." the maid replied;
"Only the parson can
Make free wood of my stocking, sir,
For any living man."
Syean B. ASTRONY. THE TOWN'S PHOTOGRAPH.

A dispute about the salary claims of certain postmasters, now being heard in the Court of Claims, illustrates the fact often commented upon that the United States is one of the worst debtors a man States is one of the worst debtors a man can possibly have. Under the law, postmasters whose business has in-creased so as to fill certain conditions are entitled to an increase of compensa-tion. Instead of being able to go and obtain their money without delay, as they could in an ordinary business transaction, they are obliged to go into court, incur the expense of attorneys fees and suffer numerous vexatious delays and hindrances. Every few weeks the local authorities have brought to their attention some old broken-down man or some aged widow who came to Washington to obtain money due from the Government and who find themselves without even the means to take them back home. They know that the money is due under the law and think that by coming and applying for it personally they can get it as they would at a bank or a business house. Their misconception of the Government's methods causes numerous respectable people not only to waste their time and money but to be thrown for time being upon public charity. ourt, incur the expense of attorney

Yesterday afternoon Secretary Blaine resterday afternoon Secretary Blatne might have been seen enjoying the fine weather in his carriage. It is the first time that he has ventured from his hotel recently, and accompanied by his wife he appeared to enjoy his airing quite as much as the clerk who is out on a Sunday excursion with his girl. When he returned to the Normandie his manner and appearance gave visible evidence of the beneficial effects of the ride. His health is so much improved that his physician thinks there is no further necessity for his remaining at the hotel, and has given his permission for him to go into active business in his

The evanescent character of fame is illustrated in the case of Marion D. Newman (known by several romantic Newman (known by several romantic aliases). A few weeks ago he was the object of unlimited attention among the ladies and the subject of columns of comment in the daily newspapers. Now he sits in the jail comparatively unknown, and the admirers of his amorous escapades pass his career unnoticed and turn to their old ragged-edged copy of Don Juan. As a breaker of feminine hearts, a winner of affection, regardless of age or matrimonial condition. Mr. Newman has a record that is seldom beaten. He has been charged with bigamy and has brought consternation to the hearts of numerous young women to the hearts of numerous young women who have answered his advertisements in the newspapers. At present he is en-gaged in cultivating a handsome set of Prince of Wales whiskers which change his appearance to a surprising extent and which will put him in trim for con quests ad libitum when he gets out of the penitentiary.

Miss Lydia Thompson, under the es-cort of her manager, Mr. E. Hutchin-son, and a number of her company, paid a visit to the Monument yesterday. Mr. Harry Starr, one of the comedian, Mr. Harry Starr, one of the comedians, who holds the championship belt of England as a sprinter, was with the party. On a wager with Mr. Louis Kellcher, also a comedian of the company, Mr. Starr bet that he could beat the elevator to the top of the Monument. After Miss Thompson, Messrs. Hutchinson, Kellcher and several others were in the elevator the word was given and the lift started. Mr. Starr also started up the 875 steps. The plucky little comedian kept even with the car, when he made a grand spurt and reached the top ten seconds in advance of the party. He said that he never climbed so many stairs before in his climbed so many stairs before in his life and he wouldn't do it again for something pretty.

T. J. Trodden of the Howard House, the drum major of the National Guard band, accompanied the Washington Light Infantry to New York. Mr. The 100 years to come are fuller of dangers for the United States than the century just ended. The century past century just ended. The century past o'clock yesterday morning. He wore a po'clock yesterday morning. He wore a left Brooklyn to visit some of his old friends. Mr. Trodden, in conversation with a Critic reporter, said: 'Thirty years ago I left Brooklyn I came away with the left Brooklyn. I came away with the Fifth New York Heavy Artillery. After the war 1 settled in Washington, where I've been ever since. I was one of the five newsboys to sell the Brooklyn Eagle when that paper was first started. The paper was very small, about the size of the original Carric. The office was down on Fulton street, near Fulton Ferry. I was one of the first carriers, and delivered the Eagles to the Fourteenth Brooklyn before their departure for the war. I also delivered the paper to the same regiment on their return to the same regiment on their return from the first battle of Manassas. Of from the first battle of Manassas. Of that fine body of men only about 150 came back from that engagement. I suppose I will find it somewhat difficult to recognize any of the old fellows connected with the Eagle, but I am going to make the effort. I imagine that although the place will appear strange to me I will be able to find the old landmarks."

Colonel Crounse, the enterprising cor-respondent of the New York World, has ust returned to Washington after a just returned to Washington after a nine-days' trip from Mount Vernon to nine-days' trip from Mount Vernon to New York, going over the same ground G. Washington went over one hundred years before. Colonel Crounse was ac-companied by Artist Hopkins, a young man who was born with a little hatchet in his mouth, but he spat it out early. Illustrated articles from the two trav-elers appeared each day in the World as they journeyed along, a feature of their they journeyed along, a feature of their trip, which bulged out considerably beyond George Washington's style of travel. The Colonel's well-known truthfulness beamed and scintillated in every line he wrote, and some of Hop-kins' sketches of old houses were so kins", sketches of old houses were so natural they had to be propped up in the paper with italic slugs. The voyage was not made entirely upon a bed of roses, the livery rigs which they hired from town to town not being constructed on the rose-bed plan. The last four or five days it rained black cats and pitchforks, and the Colonel had to insist upon his long-legged companion getting out and wading while he rode upon his back and viewed the landscape o'er, so to and viewed the landscape o'er, so to speak. They finally reached New York speak. They finally reached New York city, proper, on a ferry-boat, after a journey of incredible hardships, starvation, privation and blanknation, with nothing to drink but water. Hopkins was sorely tempted at one time, in crossing the Delaware, to devour Crounse, but the Colonel was too tough, and the starving artist ate a large chunk of damp night air and retired to rest upon his pallette. The Colonel returned with the full purpose of slaving General Greely on sight and ripping all the veneering, the knobs and the marble top off of the Weather Bureau, but he has been persuaded to restrain his impetuosity and not make a slaughterhouse of the Signal Service Office. It is expected that Colonel Crounse will be sent to Africa by the World to find be sent to Africa by the World to find Mr. Thomas Stevens, that other World man, who has gone there to find Stan-ley, who went to find Emin Bey, who went there to find his way out again.

There is a school teacher in Tuscarawas County, Ohio, who is forty years old, and has never been twenty-five miles away from home. New Philadelphia is the biggest lown he has ever seen.

MATTER WORTH READING

A very considerable effort was made I understand, to drag Mrs. Jenny June Crowly into the late controversy be-tween Elia Wheeler and Mrs. Atherton. But the ex-President of Sorosis is a conservative person and would have nothing to do with the mud-slinging of these two remarkable females. She permits both of them to attend her re eptions, and, at the last evening give by her in Forty-sixth street, an amu ing divertisement was given to the com-pany in the spectacle of the Wilcox in one corner of the room and the Ather-ton in the other, hissing out scandals and vituperations against each other. But Mrs. Crowly, who is an old newspaper woman, would neither endeavor to patch the quarrel, nor take sides in the fray. She quickly recognized, as anyone who knows the women ear easily do, that all Mrs. Wilcox and Mrs. Atherton wanted was the advertisemen of a wrangle in the newspapers. The otherwise undistinguished gentle man who rejoices to have and to hole Ella Wheeler is a small but exceedingly

Ella Wheeler is a small but exceedingly rotund person, who is something in the dry goods line. Mr. Wilcox is what is known as a drummer. The exigencies of business compel Mr. Wilcox to be journeying through the West most of the time. But he is very proud of the poetess of passion, and by the help of Mr. Romeike's News Agency he is in daily supply of all the things written about his wife. Most of these come from the pen of Fannie Edgar Thomas. Miss Thomas is a general hack writer, an intimate friend of Mrs. Wilcox, and from her assiduous ink bottle flows almost all the notions that are constantly in print about the woman with stantly in print about the woman with the mole on her spine,—[New York

Male "Fads" in Jewelry.

There is an increasing "fad" in the direction of men—and men of acknowledged tastes—wearing jewelry. Not alone do they break the immaculate whiteness of their shirt bosops with stones of marvelous brilliancy and coloring, set as studs; but they choose scarf plus of quaint designs, watch chains in massive link patterns, striking devices in cuff buttons; to say nothing of the innumerable finger rings, encrusted silver eigarette case, chused gold match innumerable finger rings, encrusted silver eigarette case, chased gold match box and enameled pencil case. Jewelers go further, and assert that there is a steady demand from the masculine patrons for long, slender gold chains which are worn concealed around the neck, and on which are hung senti neck, and on which are hung senti-mental souvenirs, in the way of tiny lockets, containing cherished portraits or locks of shining hair. Nor, so they assert, is the bangle quite discarded from off the masculine arm; but it is carefully guarded, and is no longer per-mitted to slip into view, below the cuff. —[May Table Talk. A Deer-Fattening Scheme

Near Valdosta, Ga., are a couple of deer farms, where herds of these ani-mals are kept within a twelve-foot wire fence and pastured upon rye and grass till they are fatter than butter. The original stock came from Florida, and the animals are now pretty well domes ticated. The proprietors say that they can raise venison much easier and more cheaply than they can turkey, and that they expect enormous profits when fairly under way. Silk, which has been known in Chin for 4,000 years, is in some sort a royal institution. An Empress of China first discovered it, and to this day a royal princess opens the season of silk-working by gathering mulberry leaves from her garden to feed the worms. Great care has been taken to keep up the breed of those useful animals, which is the best in the world, but liable to de eriorate outside its native country.

The Guinea Cow.

The Guinea Cow.

The Guinea cow of South Georgia may one day rival the Jersey. It was brought by Spaniards into Florida, is stolid and squarely bailt, with legs only a foot long. The cow is hardy and so hearty as to keep fat on woodland pasture, and gives three to four gallons of milk each day, which, though not so rich as Jersey milk, is better liked by its consumers.

It is said that the new gold field in bust, and the hands and feet, which are the Transvaal was discovered by acciupon a hunter and imbedded its horns so firmly in the soil that after capture they had to be dug out, and were found to be fast in an eight-pound nugget.

A Minnesota man has set up a bear ranch, where he feeds cornmeal to the bears he traps just as he would do hogs, till they are in prime condition, when he slaughters them, and, besides selling the meat at high figures, gets a good many dollars for each of the pelts.

How Did He Know? Morris of Evansville, Ind., claim that his dog found a two-dollar and-a-half gold coin in Independence and brought it home to him. How he knows that the dog found the money in Independence has not been ex-

A French scientist says that, allowing five acres for each inhabitant, Europo has room for 115,000,000 more people, Africa for 1,336,000,000, Asia for 1,402,000,000, Oceanica for 515,000,000 and America for 2,000,000,000,

VISITORS DISAPPOINTED

Notwithstanding the fact that the re Notwithstanding the fact that the pa-pers announced that President Harrison would go to New York Sunday night, several hundred strangers marched themselves to the White House yester-day for the purpose of paying their re-spects to the Chief Magistrate, and when they were informed that the Pres-ident was over in New York to attend the Washington Centennial Celebration, they actually growled and abused the the Washington Centennial Celebration, they actually growled and abused the President for enjoying a little recreation. The absence of the President and the usual crowd of place-seckers gave a needed opportunity to the White House clerks to catch up in a measure with the business that has accumulated within the past few weeks. When the President returns he will find his desir within the past few weeks. When the President returns he will find his desk in the library looking like a new one. In fact, he will hardly recognize it. The desk has been in the White House for years. It is made from a portion of the timbers used in the construction of Her Majesty's ship Resolute, which was sent to the Arctic region in search of Sir John Franklin.

The usual amount of routine business was transacted in the Departments yesterday, but the noise and clamor incident to the change of Administration for once was lacking. All the officials who could possibly get off were over in New York, and until their return the minor subordinates will wear hats of a larger size. The fellows who expected their appointments yesterday will have their appointments vesterday will have to wait several days more with the usual expense. And to-day the clerks themselves will enjoy a little rest, as all the Departments are closed.

"School Grounds," "The Spring Garden," "Muskmelons," "Crysanthemuns in the Imperial Gardens at Tokio" and "The Pinetum at Kew," are among the subjects discussed in "Garden and Forest" for May I. The fine old clipped garden at Levens Hall, in England, is prettily illustrated, and Mrs. Van Rensselaer's chapter in the "History of the Art of Gardening" deals with Babylonia and Judea.

ANTEROS: LIFE WITH PASSION

The Critic reprints from the "Current Literature," New York, for May a story by Donald McLeod, appearing in the Knickerbocker forty years ago and the Knickerboeker forty years ago and prefaces it with an explanatory editorial comment by the "Current Literature."

"Still again! The symptoms are not new. There has been no flying leap from Swinburne to Amelie Rives—from Balzac to Saltus. "What does this tendency to realism signify? What deductions must be drawn from the novel of passion." What are we coming to?" In passion? What are we coming to?" In point of fact we are just about where we point of fact we are just about where we were fifty years ago—only there are more of us. Among the American writers of yesterday—as of to-day—are those of the realistic school—aye! and of the eratic school. There are those who wrote of life and its passions—good and evil. The period of the old "Knickerbocker Magazine" was an era of intense respectability in the literature of our country, and its contributors were among the literary ploneers of America. among the literary pioneers of America. Yet within it pages and from the pen of one of its "most valued and gifted conone of its "most valued and gifted contributors" we take an authoritative example of ultra, realistic fiction which, were it written to-day, would have sent the critics into apoplectic fits. It is the story of Anteros—"A Life With One Passion." It falls from the lips of a woman. It is the story of her life and her love. It is told with uncompromising directness—with brutal truth. There is, literally, neither side effects nor setting of any description to this There is, literally, neither side effects nor setting of any description to this picture of a purely animal passion. It opens with a pen portrait of the heroine—a languorous, voluptuous study, whose sensuousness is purposed and complete, and unequaled by anything which a younger generation has given to the world. Not a possibility for sensual effect has escaped the author. The atmosphere of the story is heavy with the perfumes of jessamines, heliotrope and violets—steeped in strong wines. In the simple directness of its old-fashioned English, the story marks the various stages of an intensely animal love, beside which that of Barbara Pomfret for her cousin takes on the tender, delicate colors of a pason the tender, delicate colors of a pas-toral idyl. The voluptuous heroine is presented to us in every phase of her sensual nature, from first burning glance—the first crushing consciousness of passion, which brings unconscious-ness with it—through days of delirium and nights of languor, to the last furious embrace, in which this creature of the senses, vampire-like, draws the very breath of life from the lips of the very breath of life from the lips of the man she loves—and whom, with this very love, she kills. This story is called a psychological study. It appears in a gallery of selections from the best numbers of the "Knickerbocker Magazine"—side by side with the work of such writers as Washingtou Irving, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Rev. Samuel Osgood. Rev. George Bethune, D. D., Donald G. Mitchell, William Cullen Bryant, Bayard Taylor, John G. Saxe, James Russell Lowell, Henry W. Longfellow and George William Curtis. For the benefit of those critics, whose pure white souls are harrowed with the fear of the possible result of the new eratic of the possible result of the new cratic novel on "The Daughters of America." and for those of our readers who would like to judge of what the mothers of America passed through unscathed

America passed through unscathed about forty years ago, we print the story of Anteros in this number of "Current Literature."

There is a young, beautiful woman sitting among pillows and cushions in an arm-chair by an open window. The still atmosphere is heavy with the scent of tuberoses, jessamines and heliotropes. Filled as the air is with these rich fragrances, she adds to them that of pastilles, burning on the chimney-ploce, and her handkerchief is wet with extract of violets. Her skin is white, but not transparent; it reminds you most of cream-laid note paper. The eyes are lazy, full, and the color of the double English violets. The hair is blonde, an ashy blonde, and has scarcely a wave in it; it could not be made to curl, but lies in rich, heavy, almost damp bands, about the face. Her form, though delicate, is thoroughly developed, the flesh icate, is thoroughly developed, the flesh firm, the outlines as if chiseled, growing thin now, except the throat and bust, and the hands and feet, which are with dimples at the joints. She wears a pale blue silk robe de chambre openg in front to show an under-dress of white watered silk. On the tabl beside her is a bottle and a half-filled beside her is a bottle and a half-filled glass of heavy, rich Portugal wine, pure juice, which leaves a spoonful of thick sediment in every glass.

Except to taste this, or to inhale the odors, as the light air throws them occasionally through the window, or to respire the violet from the handker chief, she seldom raises her head from where it reclines, thrown back upon the cushions, in which position she looks passionately and dreamily at her husband's portrait, which hangs upon the wall before her.

The portrait exhibits a man of 26 or 27, somewhat sallow, thin, with heavy, 27, somewhat sallow, thin, with heavy, wavy chestnut hair, and large, brown eyes, not without some flerceness in them. There is nothing remarkable about the face except the intense redness of the lips—the lady has that also—so red that you fancy the painter a bad chooser of colors; yet they say the likeness is perfect.

likeness is perfect.

These are all the accessories which need be mentioned. Let the lady tell her own story:

My father died before my birth; my mother perished in bringing me, her only child, into the world. They left me a large fortune, and my guardians were well-bred, very ordinary, everyday, well-to-do people.

were well-bred, very ordinary, every-day, well-to-do people.

The first thing I ever loved, except strong perfumes and flowers, was a bird—an English bullfinch—which seemed to be very fond of me, until one day, when I was about 12 or 13, it flew o a young girl who was visiting me, and refused to come back when I called it. When it did come, I killed it is my hand.

it in my hand.

I don't think that I loved anything much, except this bird that I crushed fiercely in my hand; at least, until I was fully 18 years of age.

I was taken into society quite young —at 16—and I saw a good deal of it.
I was rich and beautiful, so that I did not lack suitors who professed the pro-foundest devotion for me. Some of them were pleasant—one or two hand-some and fascinating men—and I often wondered at my perfect indifference for them all. By and by I won the rep-utation of a cold, unaffectionate girl Cold and unaffectionate! Ah, if the could have seen the ceaseless agonies of tears into which I burst when alone in my own room; if they could have seen my arms trying to wind themselves round my own body, or feel the thrills and yearnings of the unknown passion that convulsed me—that was consuming my heart!

There was a large party given on my 18th birthday and it took its usual course. I have forgotten all about it until about the middle of it, I saw a young man standing in a corner, look-ing at me. As I met his look an in-describable thrill passed through me and I felt suddenly faint. My impulse and I felt suddenly taint. My impulse the was to rise and clasp him in my arms. He frightened me, yet 1 felt a strange desire to get near him. When he came at last, introduced by my guardian as Mr. Mark Winston, I had scarcely strange to bow. He asked me to dance and I reused, I know not why. Then he sat down and talked to me a little while and I answered—I know not how or what. But he dropped a glove be-side me and when he had gone I picked it up and put it into my bosom, and it up and put it into my bosom, and when I was alone I knew that I loved him and that that love was my very life and soul.

Mark Winston was a Carolinian, and Mark Winston was a Carolinian, and had brought no letters to the North except to my guardian, and our house was almost his only visiting place. There was a pleasant, lively girl staying with us then, and our party commonly consisted of the old people, Mark, Mary Lee and myself. In the spring we went to a country seat at New Rochelle, where we were to stay some months.

Every-hour my passion grew stronger; every hour it destroyed some minor characteristic of my nature and advanced toward its end, the absorption of my whole nature. Still I shunned him. I craved to be near him, to hear him, to watch him, to touch him with vanced toward its end, the absorption of my whole nature. Still I shunned him. I craved to be near him, to hear him, to watch him, to touch him with my dress in passing; but when he came to me, a positive fear would seize me and I would feel almost iii. I stole from him; stole his gloves, his hand-kerchief: I have even picked the pockets of his coat when it hung in the hall. Once, noticing that the ribbon of his watch was worn out, Mary Lee gave him another; in putting it on he broke the crystal of his watch and carried it up to his room. But for this, I would have fainted—or else sprung upon her; but this gave me a gleam of light. When he returned to the drawing room I procured snother ribbon, and, going into his room, took her ribbon and tore it to pieces with my hands and teeth and carried it out and stamped it into the black soil of the garden; but that which he had worn I had already in my bosom, and I treasured that and the gloves and the hand-kerchief, and whatever else of him I had and kissed them and slept with them in my bosom through the long nights. Yet for all I could get no nearer to him.

On the seventh of June—I had bought an almanae and I used to mark the days on which I saw him—on the seventh of June I saw him come up the Avenue and heard him enter the house. He did not mount the stairs, but passed into the drawing-room. I know that Mary Lee was there alone. I went to my dressing-table and swallowed from a flacon a glass of cologne water. Then, when the shudder and tremor had passed, I went stealthily down and saw the door half open. Half way down the stairs I heard a volce, soft, low, pleading, tender—God! how long has this been going on? My satin slippers made no noise and I reached the door—they sat behind it, but a huge mirror reflected everything in the room. I saw them in the glass—he with her hand in his—I watched them ther for —they sat behind it, but a huge mirror reflected everything in the room. I saw them in the glass—he with her hand in his—I watched them there for a thousand centuries! I heard him say—"Do, dear Mary, do promise for to-morrow"—and I heard her answer in a timid, gentle voice, which seemed to me to be full of love—"No, Mark, I does not

Again he plead to her and then-my eyes upon the mirror—then he took her hand and kissed it.

I struck the door open—my hand was black for two weeke—and went in to where he still held her hand and stood before them and struck my foot upor

Mary Lee ran out of the room.
"So!" I said, "you come here fo that, do you?"

He looked at me amazedly.
"You respect not even the sanctity of a friend's house—and you call yourself a friend's house—and you call yourself a gentleman!"

He grew white. His eyes seemed three shades darker and burnt, like living coals, with rage.
I had no fear—"And to love a thing like Mary Lee!"

Then the fierceness passed from his eyes and a flood of unutterable passion flowed into them, and he said:

"I was begging her to intercede with you, Louise, I never loved any but you. But, you are so cold—"

I sank down upon the floor and clasped his knees and I said—"Mark, I love you and have loved you and will love you to eternity."

I remember sitting upon his knees with his strong arms, like mighty cords, binding my bosom upon his. And then came that wild rain of kisses—consuming, devouring kisses—on my hair and cyes and forehead and quicker and faster on my lips and neck. I fainted on his convulsed bosom and impassiond, throbbing heart.

We were married on the fifteenth of liately.
I don't remember that we ever or drew or had any music or anything else of that kind. I remember the walks in the forest or on the shore and the flowers and the perfumes he liked

I remember that I never before had taken particular care of my person except what is natural to any gentle-weman, but that then I bathed twice a day and studied every tollet—chiefly the morning and night dress, and used no perfume but tuberose, heliotrope and violet—and lived as in a dream—a long, may be a bad, wicked, cruel, passionate dream. te dream.
All that I know is that I was separated from him and the physicians said he was dying, and when I asked to see him they said: "No! Anybody but you!"

He grew worse. They had forbidden me to go near him. My presence alone, they said, was injurious to him. They would not answer for his life if I were would not answer for his life if I were to insist on seeing him. So I kept away in my own chamber while people were stirring in the house, but in the early morning, when all was still, I crept to the door of his room and there I used to crouch down and think of him. By and by this became unendurable, and I began to question whether this cold-browed, quiet, scientific man had a right to keep a wife from her husband. I had heard that for a point of medical interest they would not hesitate to destroy fifty fives in the elucidation. I determined to question Mark's nurse. "Does he suffer much?"

"He makes no compaint, ma'm. He

'He makes no complaint, ma'm. He matimes puts out his arms and then folds them back round him as if he were folding something in them." "Does he talk at all?"

"He only says: 'Louise—Louise.'"
An idea flashed upon me.
"Nurse," I said, kindly, "how long have you been watching? You must be fired."

be tired."

"Three nights, ma'am," she answered; "but if I was ever so tired I am forbidden to let you take my place."

"Yes," I said. "Well, to-night I will bring you a good glass of wine into the small dining-room, and when he is asleep you may go there and find it. Now go in there and mind you watch him well."

She went into Mark's room and I went to the dining-room. I took a went to the dining-room. I took a small decanter of port-carried it to my room and put some laudanum into it— theu I took it into the small dining-room and placed it on the table and be-side it some biscult and anchovy paste to increase her thirst so that she might drink it all.

It was nearly 11, then and I undressed myself. I put on the pale-blue dressing-gown in which he used to admire me and let the bands of my hair.

struck 1, I went down, peeped in and saw the nurse moving about the chim-ney piece. Then I went back to my room, sat down, and thought of Mark until 2. When I went down again the nurse was dozing in her chair. I could not see Mark, but I heard him move and say "Louise"—and I shivered as I heard him. The movement awoke the nurse. She turned toward me with a half guilty start.

half-guilty start.

I beckoned to her. She glanced at her charge and then came out. She was cold. They allowed no fire in Mark's room. I teld her to warm herself at the fire that was blazing in the dining-room, and to take the wine. I talked to her there, but made my remarks at long intervals, so that after a short while she fell back upon the cushions and slept heavily.

Then I rose and walked to the mirror. I saw that I was very pale and won-

Then I rose and walked to the mirror.

I saw that I was very pale and wondered what he would think of me.
Then I went into the room and stood beside him.
He saw me at once. He put out his arms and said; "Louise—Louise!" And I sank down into his arms.
The light in the same.

I sank down into his arms.

The lights in the room had burned out and the first gray tints of morning began to appear when I felt a fearful shudder pass over Mark's form and he writhed himself free from my close embrace. Then he asked, hoarsely, for voter.

water.

I sprang up, gave him a drink, and then stood by his bedside. His eyes were on fire, his cheeks were covered with a burning flush and his hands trembled violently.

"Louise," he said, "I am dying."

An indefinable terror seized me. I crouched down beside him, my eyes fascinatedly fixed upon his.

"Louise, they told me that you were my death—they told me that your love had killed me!"

had killed me!"

He put out his arms toward me, but I shrank from him with my blood curdled.

"Louise," he went on, "I mocked at them! I said you could not kill me, for you had my life and soul in you as well as your own—God! What a pain!"

His form was thrown up from the bed in his agony and then fell down again. "Mark! What can I'do for you.

darling?"
"Did you speak, Louise?" he said, with a wild stare, "I saw your lips move, but only heard your low, sweet voice, saying 'Mark-Mark! I you!' I hear it always! I feel breath upon my lips now touise! Quick—

Louise! Quick—'
I bent toward him. His arms caught me in a fierce embrace, and so he held me as if he would press my very life into his bosom and he fastened his red And there, in that clasp, the fires faded from his eyes, and his lips froze

CULINARY MAXIMS

Late fruit keeps well.
Eating sets the head right.
He preaches well who lives well.
Stingy living is not frugality.
Keep the feast to feast day. A good meal is worth hanging for. His bread fell into the honey. A young glutton maketh an old be upon mine.

Is there nothing between the fast and the feast?

A hungry stomach seldom loathes common victuals.

There is never enmity between the cook and the butter. A hungry man discovers more than a hundred lawyers.

When it rains macaroni there will be a fine time for gluttons.

Three things kill a man: a scorching sun supressed against the second second.

sun, suppers and cares.

They must hunger in frost who spring-time have lost.

We must eat and drink though every we must eat and drink though every tree were a gallows. Consummate pleasure is not in the costly flavor but in yourself.—[Lucul-lus in May Table Talk.

DIEB. REAGAN—On Monday, April 29, 1889, after a lingering illness, Patrick Reagan, a native of County Clare, Ireland, but for the past 40 years a resident of Washington.

Friends are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from his daughter's residence, Lincoln avenue, Wednesday, at 2 o'clock p. m. JACKSON—On April 29, 1889, at 5 o'clock a. JACKSON—On April 29, 1889, at 5 o'clock a, m, of consumption, Mary E., wife of Freder-ick A. Jackson, aged 65 years. Funeral from her late residence, 919 Ninth street northeast, on Wodnesday, at 2 o'clock p, m, Interment at Rock Creek. Friends and relatives invited to attend.

UNDERTAKERS

WILLIAM LEE (Successor to Henry Lee's Sons), UNDERTAKER 392 PENN. AVENUE N. W.,

South Side. Branch office, 498 Maryland ave. s. w. A UGUST BURGDORF, UNDERTAKER.

116 Penn, ave. n. w., between 3d and 414 sts PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS.

PROPOSALS FOR MISCELLANEOUS SU
Palles,—War Department, April 2, 188
Scaled proposals (in duplicate) will be resived at this office until 1 o'clock p. 1
Wednesday, May 22, 1889, for furnishing M cellaneous Supplies, consisting of Broom Brushes, Soaps, Towels, etc., etc., for t War Department and its bureaus in Washin ton, during the fiscal year ending June 1 1800. Blank forms of proposals, showing t items and estimated quantities required, it gether with instructions to bidders, will furnished on application to this office. Bit will be considered on each item separate. Proposals must be addressed to the undisgned, indorsed on the outside of the env ope, "Proposals for Miscellaneous Supplie M. H. THOPP, Chief Supply Division.

Droposals For Stationery. THOPOSALS FOR STATIONERY

Wan DEPARTMENT, April 2, 1889.
Scaled proposals, in duplicate, will be received at this office until 1 o'clock p. m., WEDNESNAY, May 15,1889, for furnishing Stationery for the War Department and its bureaus in Washington during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1899.
Blank forms of proposals, showing the items and estimated quantities required, together with circular relating thereto, will be furnished on application to this office.
Bids will be considered on each item separately.

rately.
Proposals must be addressed to the under signed, indorsed on the outside of the envel-ope, "Proposals for Stationery."
M. H. THORP, Chief Supply Division. EXCURSIONS.

O CCOQUAN PALLS—THE NEW STEAMER BARTHOLDI leaves Shoriff's wharf 9 a. m. daily, after April 28, for Occoquan Falls. Beturning at 7 p. m., stopping at Alexandria. Music. Fairyland Vineyard furnishes all the grapes and ruspherries in their season that you can eat. W. W. GILES, Master. HO! FOR GREAT PALLS AND CABIN SiOR makes her regular trips on Sunday. Monday. Wednesday and Friday, leaving ligh st. and Canal, Georgetown, at 8 a. m. Will commence April 21 Fare, 50c., round

MOUNT VERNON:
MOUNT VERNON:
MOUNT VERNON!

STEAMER W. W. CORCORAN Leaves 7th-st. wharf daily (except Sunday) for MOUNT VERNON At 10 o'clock a. m. returning, reaches Wash-ington about 3.36 p. m. MONEY TO LOAN.

P. A. DARNIELL, 618 F st n W.

Advertisements under this head, four lines of less, 25 cents for one insertion; 50 cents for three M ONEY TO LOAN ON REAL ESTATE OR first-class securities at lowest rates of interest. No delay where security is good.

O. C. GREEN,

800 7th at. n. w.

MONEY TO LOAN
In sums to suit
On Approved Real Estate Security,
B. H. WARNER & CO.,
B. H. WARNER

AMUSEMENTS. A LBAUGH'S GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.

OPENING OF THE SUMMER OPERA SEA-THE LAMONT OPERA CO.,

Including Helen Lamont, Allee Carle, Ma-bella Baker, Laura Millard, Louis De Lange, George Traverner, Sig. Brocolini, George Broderick, N. S. Burnham, &c. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Evngs, RIDDYGORE Thurs., Frl., Sat. Matinee and Night, YEOMEN OF THE GUARD.

Special Scenery, Costumes, etc., RESERVED SEATS 50 AND 750. GENERAL ADMISSION, 25c. SEATS ARE NOW ON SALE.

NEW NATIONAL THEATRE. Every Evening, Matinees Wed. and Sat. BEGINNING MONDAY, APRIL 29.

LYDIA THOMPSON ENGLISH BURLESQUE COMPANY. Monday Tuesday and Wednesday Evenings and Wednesday Matinec, STEPHENS' AND SOLOMON'S SATTRE, PENBLOPE.

Phuriday, Friday and Saturday Evening and Saturday Matince,
THE NEW HISTORICAL BURLESQUE. COLUMBUS.

Monday, May 6-ROLAND REED IN THE A LBAUGH'S GRAND OPERA-HOUSE.

ONE WEEK. COMMENCING MONDAY, APRIL 29, MATINEES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY The American Character Actor

HENRY LEB. In the New York and Boston success

Direct from PALMER'S THEATRE, NEW YORK. MAGNIFICENT COSTUMES, ELABORATE SCENERY, NOVEL STAGE EFFECTS.

NEXT WEEK-Opening of the Summer HARRIS' BIJOU THEATRE. Matthees, Tues., Thurs. and Sat.
MARTIN HAYDEN and MISS EUGENIE
BESSERER.
In the famous Melo-dramatic production of

HELD IN SLAVERY. tartling Effects. Rain Storm of Heal Wate Next Week—EDWIN F. MAYO. ZERNAN'S NEW WASHINGTON THEA

Eleventh street, south of Penna ave. MR. RICHARD HUME. And his own Great Company of Comedians, in the latest Farce Connedy, GINGER SNAPS. Matiness Mon., Tues., Thur., Sat. Cheap prices, 10, 15 and 25 cts. Night—gen-eral admission, 25c. A NNUAL MAY FESTIVAL YOUNG PRO-PALE'S UNION of the Church of Our Pather, corner 15th and L. sts. n. w., Thurs-day and Friday evenings, May 2 and 3, 1880, at 8 o'clock. at 8 c'olock.
THURSDAY, "Lord Ullin's Daughter."
FRIDAY, "Ackland Lord Boyle" and bis

Admission10c BATTLE OF

BULL RUN. ADMISSION.....25 CENTS

IT STANDS AT THE HEAD 26th Annual Tour of the Great and only FOREPAUGH * SHOW.

COW BOY SPORTS

WILD WEST EXHIBITION DAYS AND NO LONGER, a

CAPITOL PARK, WASHINGTON, Wednesday & Thursday Three Times the Greatest Show on Earth Three Great Circum Companies: Elevated Stages! Two Mammoth Menageries! Peerless Paris Ilippodrome! Tremendous Trained Wild Beast Exhibition!

wild beast Exhibition:
100 Maryelousi, Feducated Animals:
30 Performing Klapmants:
160 DESTINGUISHER ARTISTS:
1-400 EES-AND HORSES:
1-400 SCOUTS AND HORSES:
200 SCOUTS AND SAVAGES: Realistic Wild West Scenes — Custer's Last Rally — Atroclous Mountain Meadow Massa-cro — Exciting Hippodrome Races — Dash-ing and Daring Arenic Triumphs. United Wild West Circus and Hippodrome — STREET PARADE —

STREET PARADE—

Will move from the show grounds at about 11 O'CLOCK on the morning of first Exhibition Day. It will be the most varied, vast, superb Show Pageant ever seen upon the street of an American City. Admission to all, 50 cents. Reserved Chairs on the grand stand and admission tickets at the usual slight advance will be for sale during the Exhibition at DiGOP'S date Metzerott's MUSIC STORE, ESS PENN, AVE. Two Performances—at 2 and 8 p. m. Opens one hour previous. Courteous ushers in attendance, and the same careful attention to the counfort and safety of visitors—especially addes and children—that is the distinguish feature of this Exhibition.

THE NATIONAL JOCKEY CLUB

Monday, April 29. Tuesday, April 30. Wednesday, May 1. Thursday, May 2.

RACES

Friday, May 3. Saturday, May 4. Five Races Each Day.

ALL THE FIRST-CLASS RACE HORSES AND STEEPLECHASERS.

FIRST RACE AT 3 O'CLOCK.

Special race trains via Baitimore and Obio-Railroad at 12:10, 1:50 and 2:30 p. m. Returning trains will be in waiting when the races are over.

Carriages should go via M street.

Perfect order will be preserved. Objectionable persons will, as on previous occi-ions, be excluded.

Members' badges can now be obtained from O. T. Thompson, freasurer, Vernon Row, corner Tenth afreet and Pennsylvania ave. n. w. H. D. MciNTYRE, Secretary. President. ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW CAMPBELL CARRINGTON. .

505 D street northwest, Washington, D. C. Webster Law Building, Residence, 1918 H street northwest.

Attorney-at-Law,

PEERLESS DYES ATLIBUTE